Biographical/Historical Note

Raphael Hebert and his descendants were prominent residents of West Baton Rouge and Iberville Parishes, Louisiana. Raphael Hebert was born on September 29, 1809, the fifth child of Alexander Alexis Hebert and Margarita Chaisson, who were married on May 27, 1799. Alexander Alexis Hebert, born in 1779 in St. Gabriel, Louisiana, was an original land-grant recipient in what is now the town of Brusly, Louisiana. Besides Raphael, Alexander Alexis Hebert's other children and their birth dates were Rosemond (1800), Margarita (1802), Gilbert (1804), Anna Amarinta (1806), Josephine (1811), and Marie Marcelita (1813).

Raphael Hebert married Marie Odile Landry on April 30, 1834. Marie Odile Landry was born on November 10, 1814, and baptized in St. Gabriel. Her parents were Simon Landry and Marie Hebert. Her paternal grandparents were Firmin Landry and Ludevine Babin, and her maternal grandparents were Amand Hebert and Marie Boudreaux. The names and birth dates of Raphael Hebert and Marie Odile Landry's children include Urbain (May 5, 1835), Raphael, Jr. (July 26, 1836), Alexis (January 13, 1839), Emma (1841), Marie Amanda (April 12, 1843), Marie Celestine (December 3, 1845), Marie Jeanne (June 24, 1847), Jynore (April 9, 1849), Octave (September 13, 1850), Marie Amelia (June 14, 1854), Benjamin (October 3, 1856), and Eulalie (November 30, 1858).

Melanie Hebert, a grandchild of Raphael Hebert and Marie Odile Landry, wrote her relatives from the Academy of St. Basil in Plaquemine, Louisiana, from 1870 to 1874. Her volume of letters is the largest correspondence in the collection. Melanie Hebert's son, Volney J. Knobloch, would figure decades later in the successions of Joseph Guy Hebert and Marguerite Hebert.

Following his first wife's death, Raphael Hebert, Sr., married a second time on February 26, 1870, to Julia LaBauve, born on November 6, 1846. The names and birth dates of their children were Joseph Guy (December 24, 1870), Noel Sebastian (December 25, 1871), Marie Cora (1878), Marie Marguerite Noella (October 16, 1881). Marie Cora Hebert died on November 13, 1892, Raphael Hebert, Sr., on November 16, 1894, and Julia LaBauve Hebert on February 21, 1906.

Joseph Guy Hebert practiced law in Plaquemine, Louisiana, and was active in Woodmen of the World, serving as grand secretary of the Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana district before his untimely death on May 27, 1903. Noel Hebert, Brusly merchant and postmaster, served as chairman of the West Baton Rouge Selective Service Board, in which capacity he traveled to Washington, D.C., to receive an award from President Truman. Marguerite Hebert taught for 50 years before retiring from the West Baton Rouge Parish public-school system. Noel Hebert died on February 22, 1955, and Marguerite Hebert on December 17, 1960.

Scope and Content Note

Correspondence, financial/legal papers, personal papers, printed items, and photographic materials of the Raphael Hebert family of West Baton Rouge and Iberville Parishes, Louisiana. Also included are records from St. John the Baptist Catholic Church in Brusly, Louisiana. Correspondence in French and English between Hebert family members and their acquaintances date from an 1861 Confederate soldier's letter written in Pascagoula, Mississippi, to a 1960 letter from Texan Genevieve King (Wielenberg) McNally, whose correspondence added that of her mother, Ora King, also from Texas, composes the largest series of letters by persons not related to the Heberts. Most correspondence flows between Hebert relatives and their associates in West Baton Rouge and Iberville Parishes and concerns the news in those and other Louisiana places, the most prolific correspondent being Melanie Hebert at the Academy of St. Basil in Plaquemine, Louisiana, in the early 1870s. Joseph Guy Hebert writes from New Orleans in the late 1800s while in law school, and Marguerite Hebert writes from Natchitoches, Louisiana, during enrollment at the State Normal School of Louisiana in the early 1900s. Many of the Hebert letters reflect the family's interest in civic, educational, and religious affairs, with even the author-priest Louis Schram writing to Marguerite Hebert about his book The Monguors of the Kansu-Tibetan Frontier. Family members and friends also exchange letters between Louisiana and vacation spots in Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, and other parts of the United States.

In both French and English, the financial/legal papers (1836-1960, n.d.), personal papers (1827-1957, n.d.), and St. John the Baptist Catholic Church records (1832, 1855-1874, n.d.) concentrate on matters in West Baton Rouge and Iberville Parishes and concern many of the same persons featured in the correspondence series. The early correspondence and early financial/legal papers of Noel and Marguerite Hebert identify their living in Mark and Red Eye, areas formerly distinguished from Brusly. Printed items (1861-1960) and photographic materials (1901-1954, n.d.) also relate to the Heberts and their acquaintances. Books, cards, and pamphlets highlight Catholic devotions and early-to-mid-twentieth-century pedagogy.

Series and Subseries Descriptions

I. Correspondence, [1861-1960] n.d. (1 linear foot)

Subseries 1. Assorted Correspondence, 1861-1892, n.d. Correspondence features ten letters and a note from Hebert relatives and friends. In an August 27, 1861, letter in 1827-1960, n.d.

French, Alexis Hebert describes to his father, Raphael Hebert, Sr., the life of a Confederate soldier stationed at Pascagoula, Mississippi. Other letters in French and English concern the socializing of Hebert relatives and acquaintances.

Subseries 2. Melanie Hebert, n.d. [1870-1874], 1875, 1876, 1887. Most of Melanie Hebert's letters are written from the Academy of St. Basil in Plaquemine when Melanie is a student there (1870-1874). Numbering more than 50, all but eight are in French, the eight English letters being sent to Melanie's uncle Benjamin Hebert and the French addressed to either her grandfather (Raphael Hebert) or step-grandmother (Julia LaBauve Hebert). Melanie shares gossip concerning persons in Iberville and West Baton Rouge Parishes; discusses convent education, news of the Sisters Marianites of Holy Cross, and Catholic observances; relates trips to New Orleans and other travel in the area; mentions the commemoration of Robert E. Lee's death; refers to seasonal practices such as sugar-cane grinding; and details the fashions and fads of women her age.

Subseries 3. Letters to Julia LaBauve Hebert, 1887-1905. This subseries houses letters written to Julia LaBauve Hebert in both French and English concerning news of family and friends.

Subseries 4. Letters to/from Joseph Guy Hebert and to/from Noel Hebert, 1891-1909, n.d. While at law school in New Orleans in 1891 and 1892, Guy writes in French and English to his parents and to siblings Marguerite and Noel. Later correspondence concerns plantation business and matters of family and friends.

Subseries 5. Marguerite Hebert, [1899-1955] n.d. This subseries comprises Marguerite Hebert's letters to Joseph Guy Hebert and Julia LaBauve Hebert while Marguerite is a student at the Louisiana State Normal School in Natchitoches (1899-1900). The 16 letters describe course work, student teaching, news, and special events at Normal. Marguerite mentions notable Normal faculty and staff such as James B. Aswell, Beverly C. Caldwell, Agnes Donaho, and J.E. Keeny. Other correspondence (1903-1955, n.d.) consists of letters from Marguerite while on vacation in Coopers Wells, Mississippi, and Hot Springs, Arkansas, as well as letters concerning items of interest in West Baton Rouge Parish.

Subseries 6. Letters to Marguerite Hebert, [1899-1955] n.d. In addition to sympathy notes following Noel Hebert's death in 1955, the bulk of this subseries consists of dozens of postcards sent to Marguerite from relatives, friends, and students (1905-1928, n.d.).

Subseries 7. Letters from/Relating to Ora King, Genevieve King, Mabel Landry, and Marguerite Hebert, 1902-1960. The correspondence relates to Marguerite Hebert's relationship with Ora King, Ora King's daughter Genevieve King, and Mabel Landry. The letters concern other persons and events in Louisiana; Dallas, Texas; and the Chicago, Illinois, area. Marguerite and Ora study together at Normal and maintain a close friendship thereafter, corresponding, visiting, and inspiring Genevieve to do the same. During part of this time, Mabel Landry is living with Marguerite and receiving mail (most of which remains as postcards) at their address. Ora King details the challenges of a lovelorn working mother in both plush times and the Great Depression. Ora's and Genevieve's letters as well as a letter to Genevieve from her paternal grandfather reveal the nature of the women's association with Genevieve's father, Grover Wielenberg, whose surname Ora removes after divorcing him. After re-establishing ties with her father's Illinois family, Genevieve recounts visiting them in 1933 and relates information concerning important Chicago families. Genevieve King eventually becomes Mrs. George McNally.

Subseries 8. Letters from/Relating to Carl Joseph Dupuy, Cleo A. Forcier, Louis Schram, and Marguerite Hebert, n.d. [1945-1955]. These letters pertain to Marguerite Hebert's association with a seminarian (Dupuy) and two priests, one (Forcier) being an Edmundite missionary and the other (Schram) author of The Monguors of the Kansu-Tibetan Frontier.

VI. Photographic Materials, 1901-1954, n.d. (.3 linear feet)

This series houses 11 photographs that bear neither subject identification nor date but that most probably represent relatives and friends of the Heberts and that may date from the late 1800s to the mid 1900s. One photocopied page contains images of Pierre LaBauve (d. January 15, 1879), Adonis Thibodeaux (d. September 8, 1886), Irma LaBauve Thibodeaux (d. January 25, 1924), John Thibodeaux (d. August 25, 1921), and Amy Thibodeaux Hunt (d. March 7, 1947). Six undated, unidentified copies of the same photograph probably feature Joseph Guy Hebert, as do two snapshots of a man seated in a rocker on a gallery. Nine unidentified photographs (one of which dates to 1901 and another to 1904) might be of Marguerite Hebert, alone or with others. Three 1910 photographs show three women (one of whom could possibly be Marguerite Hebert) in rocky woods. There is an undated photograph of Judith Templet and one of Maud Templet. Folder 7 contains seven photographs (n.d., 1944) with partial identification, Folder 8 houses images associated with Ora King and Genevieve King (n.d., 1925, 1941), and Folder 9 has six unidentified, undated photographs from the same roll of film and two from another. Folder 10 bears school-related images (1929, n.d.), one of them being of Lorraine Barras, and the last folder features Marguerite Hebert, Mabel Landry, and "the Red Eye LeBlancs."

I. Correspondence in French

Subseries 1. Assorted Correspondence

---“Est Pascagoula,” August 27, 1861. Alexis Hebert to his father, Raphael Hebert, Sr. Written across the top of front page: “I send you a piece of poetry that I took from a little gazette from here. Tell Amanda to save it for me for when I return.” The letter in translation reads:

“Dear Papa:

It is always with pleasure that I take my plume to give you our news, which is very good, and hope that the presence of my letter finds all of you to be the same. Raphael is still in good health. He is enjoying himself very much here. We have been here eight days. I am having a much better time here than anyplace else. That is perhaps because we have had enough hard times. However, we have all missed the island because there we had all types of liberties. We undressed in our tents to go into the Gulf, and we dressed in our tents, but here you have to be careful. You cannot go at all hours. There on the island, we were entirely free. Here we have better things like milk, oysters, fowl, eggs, fish in quantity, and we still have Mass every Sunday. I saw Mrs. and Mr. Bird at Mass Sunday. They were very happy to see us. Raphael has made many acquaintances with the young ladies from here and several other soldiers with him. It makes me think about when he came back from college. We have some Negresses to prepare our meals at a very good price. It is all divided by the mess. The one who cooks for us really makes me think of Jane, likewise stern. I assure you that she contends enough with those who are not careful. We are 12 in the mess, and she charges us 12 dollars per month, [?]. I find that to be much better than when it was the judge and the others who cooked before. She makes us gumbos, puddings, and all sorts of good things from very few things. I am sending you some watermelon seeds. It is a melon that weighed 15 pounds. It is the biggest melon that I ever saw and the best that I have eaten. With that, also some white muscadine seeds. These are also the best that I have eaten. They are so sweet, but maybe they will not come out in our weather over there. No other news except that the second day after we had arrived here, an English ship came to Horn Island. The Merymon, it appeared very big from here. The Oregon went, and they fired several cannon shots to salute each other. It was very pretty to see The Oregon going. They said that our boats go fast in the river, but they compared us to that one, however. It is for its own good that we have come here. It is very well constructed. We have received some details about the militia of West Baton Rouge here. There is a company that is organizing, but I do not believe that it will [succeed? reunite?] if it breaks up. There are 20 or so who want to come join our company. No other news. We are 1,000 with the national guard. We are fine, and we are all happy to send you our regards. I close. Receive from a son the dearest affections.

Alexis Hebert”

---“Ouest Baton Rouge,” January 24, 1862. Irma LaBauve Thibodeaux to her parents.

---Bayou Goula, December 6, 1867. “Louise” to “Mademoiselle Prospérine Hébert.”

---“Ouest Baton Rouge,” March 26, 1870. Elodie Thibodeaux to a female friend, whom she identifies as “Julia” in the text (possibly Julia LaBauve Hebert). The writer also mentions a “Melanie” (perhaps Melanie Hebert, Julia LaBauve Hebert’s step-granddaughter) and refers to post-Lenten weddings and balls.

---Plaquemine, November 15, 1875. “Euchéris” to “Ma Chère Soeur et Filleule” (possibly Julia LaBauve Hebert, for the writer also mentions “Mr. Raphael” and “Melanie”).

---“Plaquemine le 20 Février.” “Euchéris” to “Chère Soeur et Filleule.” Barely legible.

1827-1960, n.d.

---Plaquemine, March 22, 1885. "Euchéris" to "Cher Neveu." Barely legible. Mentions "Cora" and "Marguerite."

---St. Martinville, July 28, 1888. Edilia Hebert to "Chère Tante." Writes about the death of Dr. Frank Thomas.

---n.d., Love note or poem by F. Edouard Hebert.

---"[?] County, Texas, [?] juillet, 1889." Joseph Gilbert LaBauve to "Mr. Raphaël Hebert, Ouest B. Rouge." The letter – badly damaged and housed in the oversize folder – reads in translation:

"My dear uncle, I would tell you that I am a little ashamed to take up the plume today to write you. Only because I would have had to do it a long time ago, [?] to do it, but you knew the news [was?] the same thing. Thus, today I write from Texas. We arrived about three hours ago at the inn from which I write you. Our trip was one of the happiest. It is now four days since we left the lake. We arrived yesterday morning at Galveston, and we left again at 4:00 in the afternoon. Our expenses up to here have climbed to $225.00. We had a bad time leaving Galveston for here. I saw waves – real waves – of the sea. Mama, Josephine, and [?] all had seasickness, but I knew how to come out of it like an old sailor. You [?] our relatives and friends this news. All of the [?] family are wonderful and charge me with sending their regards to you. Embrace all my cousins for me [?]. Your devoted nephew, Jos. Gilbert LaBauve"
